

How to throw a taco party

Tacos — the traditional Mexican dish consisting of a corn or wheat tortilla folded or rolled with a filling inside — are everywhere these days. From corporate lunches to spa parties, and buffet tables at restaurants to taco bars at weddings, the little Mexican dish that was once served in silver mines, is enjoyed just about everywhere. The next time you have pals over, you too can throw a Mexican-themed taco party with some tasty, cheesy tacos that are healthy as well. Here's how:

CREATE YOUR OWN DIY TACO BAR

- Prep in advance by chopping the veggies and keeping them in separate bowls. Keep a variety of dressing and sauces ready as well. The tacos should be soft and warm at the time of serving.
- Let guests assemble their own tacos with a combination of toppings that they like.

DID YOU KNOW? You spend over nine years in a lifetime watching TV

The average person spends nine-and-a-half years of his/her life watching TV, according to study of 2,000 people conducted in UK. The research found the TV box is still very much the preferred way to watch television, with 90% participants watching their favourite TV shows and films using this method. During a typical year, participants in the study spent a total of 718 hours watching live TV — that equates to just under five years over the course of their lifetime.
